

Machine learning is a branch of artificial intelligence that focuses on learning from data.

It allows systems to improve automatically over time without being explicitly programmed.

Deep learning is a subset of machine learning that uses neural networks.

It is particularly effective for tasks like image and speech recognition.